CASE STUDY: WENET Custom Web Application (Whatcom Exchange Network)

Situation Overview

Whatcom County, Washington faces the unique challenge of being located along the international border to Canada. For this reason, it's particularly crucial that data be accessible and shared across the local, county and federal government agencies.

The Challenge

To allow remote, real-time searches across three different systems without compromising network security or HIPPA compliance.

Our Solution

Compu-Tech worked collaboratively with the IT Departments of several government agencies to establish guidelines for a Web Service that would allow the sharing of information between the local, county and federal levels. A huge success, this system allows deputies who are on the road to log in from their patrol cars and remotely search the complete criminal database - which contains up to 20 years of historical data including mug shots and fingerprints. In an interview with Seattle's King 5 News, Whatcom County Sheriff Bill Elfo remarked, "It's going to arm officers with information and help them do their jobs more efficiently and effectively."
